Professional and consistent

Dr Nikhil Shah of Brentwood Orthodontic and Implant Centre recently undertook a practice relocation project working with Clark Dental. He says:

"We came to work with Stuart Clark, Matt Rowlingson and the team from Clark Dental because they helped me with my initial practice fit-out ten years earlier, and I have worked alongside them ever since. The team are always professional and provide consistently excellent service, so we knew they would be the best company to work with. They get things done and resolve any problems that arise with experience and confidence. I can have an idea and they make that vision a reality."

"As far as managing the project, Matt from Clark Dental took care of all the dental aspects. They oversaw the dental fit and installation, including coordinating with builders and other contractors, and they were fantastic at ensuring this all came together for us.

"For anyone undertaking a relocation or renovation project, I would highly recommend working with Clark Dental. This project would not have turned out as well as it did without them." ■

A high-quality learning pathway

"I WAS keen to take the Inman Aligner training course after attending an inspirational lecture by Dr Tif Qureshi on 'Align, Bleach and Bond' at the FGDP," says Dr Rima Patel, who works at dental practices in Crystal Palace and Carshalton.

"Associates in both practices I work in had previously attended and begun offering the appliance to their patients, so there were always enquiries about it. I wanted to develop my skills, in order to be able to offer patients what they wanted, rather than having to refer them to a colleague.

"I had expected there to be more people attending the course on the day and the lecture to be more crowded. I was pleasantly surprised, however, that it was a small group, and that the lectures were of the highest quality. Everything was explained thoroughly and the hands-on element complemented the presentations.

"I would recommend the Inman Aligner training course to others, as I feel the IAS Academy has a structured learning pathway you can follow."

Banishing biofilm

THE CONTINUED colonisation and growth of biofilm is problematic when treating periodontal disease. However, chlorhexidine (CHX) exhibits a broad spectrum of antimicrobial activity and is able to reduce pellicle formation.

PerioChip contains 36 per cent chlorhexidine digluconate to facilitate effective non-antibiotic therapy after root surface deridement (RSD). Applied directly into periodontal pockets of 5mm or more, PerioChip slowly releases CHX to eliminate 99 per cent of bacteria over seven to 10 days.

The biodegradable gelatine insert offers up to 11 weeks of antibacterial protection after its initial course, enabling the periodontium to stabilise and the pocket to heal.

Results from clinical studies show a pocket reduction of more than 2mm in almost three quarters of patients when PerioChip was placed every three months in combination with RSD.

Is your associate agreement legally sound?

FOR THEIR own protection, practice owners need to ensure they have carefully worded, legal associate agreements in place that are approved by the Inland Revenue.

If there is no written associate agreement and a practice principal decided to terminate an associate's contract, that associate could potentially seek legal advice and could pursue a claim for unfair dismissal.

To this end, if you have an associate contract that has not been approved by the Inland Revenue, or have no contract at all, you are running a very significant risk.

Goodman Grant Solicitors brings a knowledgeable and in-depth approach to the legal side of dentistry. The company is on hand to guide you through associate agreements and ensure that you have bespoke, water-tight arrangements in place.

Don't run the risk – contact Goodman Grant today. ■
